and The Winner Is ... AGAIN!

Wickenburg Landscape has done it again! We were the only company to win a category (segmental retaining walls 1000 SF+) in back to back years at Hardscapes North America. This accomplishment means a tremendous amount to each and every one of our employees. Gaining national recognition for our projects is encouraging because we are a small company in a small town and understand that creativity, quality, and workmanship can reside in any size company. We followed this up by winning 1st place in the Interlocking Concrete Pavement Institute (ICPI) Arizona awards. Winning these awards dreams

gives hope to all the small companies out there that talent and workmanship are not monopolized in large companies.

Winning these awards also motivates us to continue to bring together innovative ideas through sound construction with the customer's desires and dreams. We have now set the bar of excellence so high it will be a challenge every day and on every project we work on, to exceed those expectations that our clients have placed on our company. The only thing that is worse than never winning, is winning awards and accolades and then failing to maintain or exceed that winning standard on future projects.

Giving Back to our Community

Wickenburg Landscape and Irrigation is very excited to be involved in two local charity projects during the last month. Nine of our employees donated a Friday afternoon to deliver and set up the bases of two vegetable gardens at Wickenburg's Hassayampa middle school for the "2011 Make a Difference Day". We were also able to donate most of the materials needed for this project that allows the children to start an urban garden and learn some great character skills all while growing fruits and vegetables. Planting the seeds of horticulture early in their lives might draw some of them into our exciting field of landscaping. We are always looking for new recruits! The second project we were asked to work on was the new learning center at our local museum. Several local donors have funded the building of the center and we were asked to get involved and bring a new and fresh look to the learning center which is now the cornerstone of downtown Wickenburg. Working alongside of museum director James Burns we have already cleaned up the entire corner, removing damaged trees, old and dying cactus, and worn out plants. Raising the tree's canopy has opened up the entrance while highlighting the center piece statue of "Thanks for the Rain". The following are projects scheduled for the upcoming months: Installing an entirely new irrigation system which will be updated to use the latest technology, planting a new selection of approved desert trees and shrubs that will enhance the feel of being in the desert southwest, and modifying the lighting system to extend the landscape beauty into the evening hours. With these renovations made to the landscape, which will enhance the exterior of the new learning center, I believe we can extend the heritage of our museum and keep our museum on that coveted list of places to go when traveling in the southwest.
